Mr. Bayard said it was pretended when this election law was passed that it would produce peaceable elections and purify them. He denied that it had produced peace or purified the ballot box. Rather it had been the agent of corruption and the grossest intimidation. He argued that the law had been administered in the interest of one political party and not in the interest of justice. There could be nothing more dangerous than to overthrow the law under pretence of enforcing the law. He denounced the test oath law and said he did not believe Congress will adjourn until that law be repealed.

There were millions in it. He said that the classification in the bill was the most simple and honest that it. He said that the classification in the bill was the most simple and honest that could be made, and that under it there would be no more fraudulent evasions of the law, as the line was distinctly defined. He was severeon sugar refiners, and spoke of them as grasping monopolists who crushed out all small competitors. The polariscope test he brought would be as polariscope test, he thought, would be an entire failure.

Mr. Garfield asked who was complaining Mr. Garfield asked who was complaining of the present law. The Treasury alone, and the complaint was that under the present law and with the color standard alone the Treasury lost from four to five millions a year, because high grades of sugar in sweetness were introduced as low grades of sugars in color, so that the law was thus evaded and the Treasury defrauded. All that the Secretary of the Treasury asked was to be permitted to use treasity asked was to be certailted to use the polariscope or other test to decide the true grade of sugars. He thought it inbecoming for the House to tell the Sectary that he could not do what he said are could and to deny him the simple protiso which he asked to enable him to col-
